Each flying year drops from its golden wing
a priceless plume,

A feather quaintly skilled to decorate our treasure room.

This year the magic quill draws landscapes wondrous fair,

Translucent lakes, great mountains capped by clouds,
and flowers rare,

Scenes from our Canada, our native land, daily more
dear,

Eternal beauty doth she stand throughout the changing year—

And still the puissant plume moves on, and deftly sketches in

Against the scenic background fair our well-loved kith and kin.

The love and joy of Christmastide will last the twelvemonth through,

Since we may live in Canada and have such friends as you.
